Hood's Cures Overpowering Sommolence of the Man Whe A curious and apparently original anecdote about the late Marshal Bazeine is related today. It refers to the sleepy habits of the man who delivered Metz to the Germans. The author of the ancedote is Lieutenant Eymard, who was permanent officer of the guard in the house at Versailles where the marshal was under carest while awaiting his court mar-

> One day Mme. Bazaine, a Mexican by birth, came to M. Eymard and asked him to be good enough to receive Queen Isabella of Spain, who was expected in the afternoon. Her majesty intended, it appears, to pay a visit to the prisoner. At about a quarter past 1 o'clock the queen ar rived, accompanied by her son, afterward Alfonso XII, and her two daughters. M. Eymard went to meet the royal party, and, as he says himself, not having been brought up in courts, but camps, he committed the awful offense of shaking the queen's hand a l'Anglaise instead of kissing it respectfully. The queen uttered a cry of discontented astonishment. but she had another surprise in store for her. The lieutenant of the guard went in to apprise Marshal Bazaine of the royal visit, expecting to find him ready for it. The marshal was, however, having his 40 winks, and although violently shaken by the officer still snored on heavily.

Eventually M. Eymard, being utterly unable to arouse the sleeper, had to inform Queen Isabella of the semicomatose condition of the marshal. The queen, evidently annoyed, returned with her children to her carriage and departed. Almost immediately afterward Mme. Bazaine entered. The officer told her about the fatal siesta. She did not express astonishment, but anger, and rushing to where her husband was upbraided him as he awoke in the most withering terms. She told him that his soporiferous habits were deplorable and detestable, and that in order to mask them people had to be allowed to say unchecked that he

Mme. Bazaine thus scolded her husband for several moments within | Prices Current by Telegraph - Local the hearing of the lieutenant, who went away wondering if the marshal's extraordinary habit of suddenly falling asleep had not contributed to bring about greater disasters than the disappointment of her most Catholic majesty and the anger of Mme. My Lord Buys a Bell.

Among the distinguished arrivals at the Burnet House was a titled Englishman, Lord William Brooks. With Lady Brooks and valet and maid accompaniment the Briton was "doing Hamerica" in great style. He is reputed to be very wealthy and eccentric and on his way from Washington, where he spent some time, came via the C. and O. line While en route the bell on the loco motive that drew his train attracted his attention, owing to the peculiar sweetness of its tone, and when the train reached the Central station his valet was commanded to go to the engineer and ascertain the price of the bell and buy it. Of course the engineer had no voice in the matter and so informed the lackey, who re ported to his lordship. Determined to have the bell, the eccentric lord visited the C. and O. officials, and after quite a lot of dickering the railway men put a good price on the bell and sold it. The coveted piece of brass was securely packed and sent to his lordship's English address.-Cincinnati Enquirer.

Horned Tond and Triceratops. There has been considerable discussion in the scientific papers about the curious habit of the "horned toads" found in Arizona and Mexico of spurting blood from their eyes when disturbed. Many witnesses agree in the assertion that the little animals really possess this power. According to one observer, the blood, or the liquid re sembling blood, comes from little or ifices just above and behind the eyes. and it appears to have a stupefying effect upon the animal covered with

The horned tond is a strange look ing creature, and in certain ways its appearance recalls one of the most remarkable monsters that in pass geological ages lived in the western part of America—the triceratops of Professor Marsh.

This gigantic animal, whose name means "three horned face," had its skull inclosed in a bony helmet, on the upper part of which, over the nose, were three stout horns. The head of one of these monsters is no ess than 8 feet long.

When a horned toad is laid upon the head of the triceratops, the resemblance is quite striking, as if this little modern inhabitant of some of the sandy plains of the west were a miniature reproduction, with variations, of the wonderful beast that roamed there in ancient times .-Youth's Companion.

No Regard For Etiquette. Having been lavishly entertained n New York, Lord de Void endeav ored to show his American friends some attention when they visited Scotland. There was an old castle at hand, and thither the host conducted the party. They were standing on the walls of the ruins looking downward into the most.

"I was showing this place to a countryman of yours last year," said his lordship, "when the poor fellow was taken with dizziness and fell. His legs were broken, and he was altogether a wreck." A series of sighs came from the ladies. There was one girl in particular whose sweet face took on a look of sorrow. This touched the host, and he moved to her side.

"Thinking of that poor chap?" he

"Yes," she answered slowly. "It was so American:"

His lordship looked puzzled, won-dering whether it was a national custom to fall from ruined walls into dry moats, but he only queried, "Yes?"

"Yes," answered the sweet American indignantly, "some of my countrymen have no manners. The idea of doing a thing like that in your company before your lordship had taken precedence!"—Harper's Week-

Terrors of the Awful Pause. We usually talk about the weather when there isn't anything else to talk about. This fact may tend to rob the subject of its importance, yet it should not. In fact, it ought to be greatly in its favor, as it is ever ready and efficient in breaking the "awful pause." Have you ever been overtaken by the awful pause? Fortunate, indeed, if you have not and entitled to heartiest sympathy if you have. It is truly awful, especially if courtesy demands that you should break it. It settles upon the best regulated companies like a nightmare and seems to paralyze the tongue and put thought to flight. No one can think of anything to say or fears to attempt to say it. Then, if ever, a fool is welcome because he doesn't think before he speaks, -Pitts burg Commercial Gazette.

Baths For Tired Feet. A warm bath for the feet with an ounce of sea salt is almost as restful as a nap. Paddle in the water until it cools, dry with a rough towel, put on fresh stockings, have a change of shoes and the woman who was "ready to drop" will have a very good understanding in 10 minutes. The quickest relief from fatigue is to plunge the feet in ice cold water and keep immersed until there is a sensation of warmth. Another tonic for the sole is a handful of alcohol. This is a sure way to dry the feet after being out in the storm. Spirit baths are used by professional dancers, acrobats and pedestrians to keep the feet in condition.—New York World
